

For the fifth year in a row, the eighth-grade class of Philadelphia's Springside School visited the Ruark Boatworks. This year each girl built a skipjack model and stand. With supervision each girl learned to use a hand jigsaw, plane, drill press and sanding blocks to refine the precut parts made by the Ruark Boatworks volunteers. Thirty-eight girls participated over three days, each taking home their model as a memento of their trip to Dorchester County.
